

Council Elections: Respect My Sex Campaign

Questions for Candidates

1. What is a woman?

Not a difficult question, yet it's one which politicians have been tying themselves in knots over recently thanks to the push to allow men to declare themselves as women in law.

Ask this question to gauge a candidate's honesty and integrity. We all know what a woman is, but if they can't be upfront and honest about this then you can't believe a word they say about anything else.

The answer we're looking for is adult human female, or the definition in the Equality Act which includes girls: a female of any age. If we can't define women, we can't protect our rights.

2. Do you understand that the Equality Act protects single-sex spaces and services?

The law provides women with important protections on the basis of SEX and it's entirely lawful to exclude men - regardless of their "gender identity" - in order to ensure women's privacy, safety and fairness.

This applies to areas where women are undressing, sleeping, accessing health & personal care services, hospital wards, prisons and sports. Ask your candidates if they know the law.
